

Culmen awarded Task Order for U.S. Department of State, Export Control and Border Security Equipment Program

WASHINGTON, September 1, 2017 — Culmen International, LLC, an internationally recognized leader in the Nonproliferation of Weapons of Mass Destruction (WMD) based in Alexandria, Va., announced today that it has been awarded a $1.9M task order with the Department of State, Office of Export Control Cooperation (ISN/ECC) Export Control and Border Security Program (EXBS) Equipment Program.

“Culmen International is both prepared and privileged to embark on this Global Initiative and looks forward to supporting the Department of State and our partner nations,” said Dan Berkon, CEO of Culmen International.

The EXBS Program works with partner governments to identify regulatory and institutional gaps and to develop resource requirements. The program provides a wide range of technical assistance, from executive exchanges to training workshops to the provision of detection equipment and specialized training for border control and enforcement agencies. The EXBS Program is active in more than 60 countries and its comprehensive approach, flexibility, responsiveness, and interagency approach make it a unique resource for addressing critical aspects of the United States' nonproliferation objectives.

Under the task order, Culmen will provide security equipment, training, and technical advisors to 14 countries in Europe, Asia, and South America. Beyond the initial equipment provisions and related training, Culmen will enhance the means through which our partner nations will develop a self-sustaining capability.
